The pharmacokinetics of the tripeptidyl peptidase inhibitor BMS-214662 was investigated in 12 healthy volunteers following intravenous administration of 10 mg BMS-214662 and 10 mg b.i.d. The use of tritium-labelled compound to measure plasma levels resulted in a mean inter-individual variability of 7.7%. 2. The two-compartment model described the kinetics of BMS-214662 well. The volume of distribution at steady state ranged from 1.8 to 7.6 L/kg, plasma clearance from 4.2 to 14.3 ml/min/kg and the terminal half-life from 43 to 68 min. 3. In all three groups of subjects, the plasma concentrations of BMS-214662 increased in a monophasic manner, reaching a maximum concentration of approximately 500 ng/ml within 4-6 h. 4. The mean absolute bioavailability from the intravenous route was approximately 47%. 5. BMS-214662 was extensively metabolized, with approximately 45-56% of the dose recovered in urine and 11-25% recovered in feces. The major metabolites were identified as the des-glycinyl metabolites, appearing as the (R)-(-)- and (S)-(+)-threo-isomers of M1 and M2, respectively, which are formed by the hydrolysis of the glycyloxy-amino moiety of the compound.
